

“Beyond the Dream”

To dream the impossible dream
Is to move far beyond merely dreaming;
To reach the unreachable star
Is to rise up to where it lies gleaming.
To fight the unbeatable foe
Is to try when you've no chance of winning;
To right such a wrong
Is to sing your swan song,
And yet worth ev'ry cost of beginning.

For fighting and dreaming and reaching,
Tho small and so minor they seem,
And righting and loving and running
All work to fulfill the grand dream
Of a world made all better for it,
E'en if none but the actor is changed,
For the power's in the trying,
The doing and dying,
The working and passion unfeigned.

So fight on and dream on and reach on
For the world that you're longing to see.
Impossible dreams are worth dreaming—
Yes, they must be dreamed, they must be!

So fear not the failures and heartaches.

Win or lose, the change will go far:

So dream on my friend,

Dream on to the end,

And reach that unreachable star!
