

Old Me

The little girl walked into the school, quivering from complete fear. She strolled into the halls, with her hands wrapping around her, as if she was trying to become invisible. The other kids were chuckling and scuttling around, little girls in their school uniforms chasing after their friends and giggling as they told secrets. The girl walked, until she was in her classroom and sat in a small chair. A little girl in a navy blue uniform said “Hi” in a hushed voice. All it took for that girl, that girl writing this today, was one word: hi.
